Keynote Speakers

“Jeanne Sarson and Linda MacDonald work nationally and internationally promoting awareness that torture victimization occurs in the private sphere and is an invisibilized human rights crime. As human rights activists, educators, published authors, and nurses, their grassroots support began 23 years ago with a woman seeking to heal from torture victimization which began in her infancy, perpetrated by family members. Since then, they have had various levels of contact with over 5000 individuals, mainly women, who report such relational torture, commonly combined with being trafficked, ‘prostituted’, and forcedly involved in pornography. Seeking to remove the human rights inequality, discrimination, and pathologisation that confront women so tortured, they have presented on panels during sessions of United Nations Commissions in New York City, Geneva, and Vienna. They are members of the NGO, the Canadian Federation of University Women (CFUW).”

Fall Gathering

Our theme for this gathering is Women Effecting Change and our two guest speakers are inspirational role models who are living this theme as they work for human rights equality and social justice for women and girls.

We are delighted to welcome Jeanne and Linda to Ottawa for our Fall Gathering. Their presentation will focus particularly on ways to advocate for those with no voice who are disadvantaged or oppressed and cannot speak up for themselves. They will bring collaborative exercises to engage us and give us practical strategies we can use to strengthen our own approach to advocacy.

Website

Jeanne and Linda live in Truro, NS, and maintain their own website where you can read more details about their important work. <http://nonstatetorture.org/>

Women Working Together

As members of CFUW, we know that women working together have a stronger voice and more power to effect positive change.
